Assistant/Associate Acting Faculty Position – Tenure-Track Appointment

Assistant/Associate Professors of Acting (two positions) The Theatre School at DePaul University in Chicago invites applications for TWO full-time tenure track faculty appointments in the Performance Department beginning Fall 2017.

Candidates for either of these positions must demonstrate excellence, dedication, and experience in teaching Acting Technique from Foundations (as reflected from Stanislavski, Spolin, Meisner, or others) through Advanced Acting in Scene Study for our BFA and MFA conservatory programs.

Please note: Both of these positions are not for specialists in Classical Acting, Voice, Movement, Comedy, History/Theory, or Audition technique.

Qualifications: Experience teaching directly in the focus area is required. Candidates must evidence a minimum of five years successfully teaching contemporary acting, improvisation for actors, and/or advanced acting techniques on a college, university, or professional level – not including teaching or assisting while in a graduate program. Candidates should have a minimum of five years professional acting and/or directing experience. Candidates should possess a terminal degree (M.F.A. or PhD) or professional equivalent. We seek candidates who are passionate and inclusive in their teaching of a culturally diverse urban student body within a conservatory setting. Both positions require excellent mentoring skills, cultural competency, and success with high-level talent at both early and advanced stages of professional artistic development. This position requires a high degree of pedagogical collaboration with other Performance faculty. Faculty plays a central role in our production season including directing students in productions, regularly advising and evaluating students on course and production work, as well as participating in service activities for both the School and University.

Because the School seeks faculty members who bring a critical perspective to issues of diversity and multiculturalism, candidates of color are strongly encouraged to apply.
